In Honor

WITH KEENEST APPRECIATION OF THE MANNER IN WHICH SHE HAS WON THE DEVOTION AND ADMIRATION OF EVERY STUDENT BY HER UNUSUAL STYLE OF TEACHING AND BY HER UNTIRING INTEREST IN THE ACTIVITIES OF THE STUDENTS, WE LOVINGLY DEDICATE THE 1936 VOLUME OF

SNIPS AND CUTS

TO

MRS. WILLIAM JAMES BRYAN

WHO, SINCE SHE CAME TO CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL TEN YEARS AGO, HAS ENGENDERED IN US THROUGH HER MATCHLESS CHARACTER, CHARMING PERSONALITY, AND RARE ERUDITION, IDEALS WHICH CHALLENGE OUR UTMOST EFFORTS.

"She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness."—Proverbs 31:26.

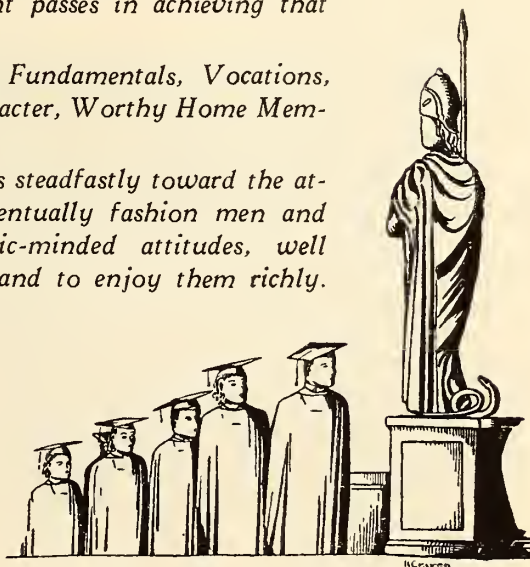

Theme

The Seven Cardinal Principles of Education form a set of standards by which an inquirer may judge the purposes and achievements of the public educational institutions of today. In the light of these objectives, one will find that the multifarious activities of school life, curricular and extra-curricular, assume a continuity, a meaningfulness, not apparent to casual observation.

That students and patrons alike may more readily understand these aims and the methods which educators employ for attaining them, this year book has been divided into seven sections, each section representing one desired end of education and each giving a pictorial and written interpretation of the experiences through which the student passes in achieving that end.

The divisions are Citizenship, Fundamentals, Vocations, Worthy Use of Leisure, Ethical Character, Worthy Home Membership, and Health.

An educational system that looks steadfastly toward the attainment of these designs must eventually fashion men and women of sound ideals and civic-minded attitudes, well equipped to live their years nobly and to enjoy them richly.

In a democracy such as America, the success of government depends in a large measure upon the intelligent citizenship of the masses. One of the chief purposes of education must be to produce the socially efficient citizen. The public funds invested in a system of public education will produce a high rate of dividends, if the schools can graduate students who are familiar with American history, imbued with American ideals, possessed of a healthy respect for law, accustomed to keeping intelligently abreast of the times, and eager to assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

The History Department of Central High School assists the student to follow the main trends of ancient, medieval, and modern history, to trace the development of American institutions, to appreciate American ideals, to understand present-day problems of national and international scope, to form impartial judgments, and to accept with pride his responsibilities as a citizen.

The activities of the Student Government Association and of the class and home room organizations provide actual practice in the business of self-government. The students elect their representatives to the Student Assembly, vote for Student Council officers according to a system patterned after that of the community, make and abide by laws, develop the ability to lead and the equally important ability to follow a leader, and learn to feel a sense of community responsibility.

Hail-fellow, well-met characteristically describes Harry. Peculiar ways, habits, and vocalizations distinguish him. He entered politics in a big way in his junior year as president of his class; this indirectly led him to the presidency of the student council. A sporty man both literally and figuratively speaking.

Thinking of a certain brisk, chivalrous fellow, Hugh Ashcraft, one may remember him moving about for a movie machine, shaking the hammer over his senior classmates, or assuming, with Hugh's dignity, weighty responsibilities as Student Council president. Cheery, smiling, willing, beguiling, that's Charlie. He descended upon Central and immediately proceeded to gather in some of the most coveted offices. He has made a name for himself as president of the Senior class, president of the band, Editor-in-Chief of the SNIPS AND CUTS. But the best thing about Charlie is that he's everybody's pal.

And now for our dashing business manager of SNIPS AND CUTS. The Baron can easily be spotted by his wavy black hair, none-too-pale yellow sweater, and très petite white shoes. When accused of chasing all Central's beauties, he responded, "Aw, they all chase me." Modest little fellow—that's Eddie.

VANCE HOBBS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Vance "Nagle" Hobbs, one swell tennis player. THE PEE-PUL'S choice, and Miss Bertha's favorite pest—next to Maurice. Vance is, in a very complimentary sense, Central's Jack-of-all-trades. BOB WANZER

"It isn't so much how you do things; it's how they're done when you get through with them." This quotation certainly applies to Bob Wanzer, for while he makes no great display of his tasks, they're always well done. His quiet dependability is noticeably outstanding.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

Central, in the fall of '33, opened to another group of Sophomores, from Piedmont, Alexander Graham, and various other schools. In the absence of Dr. Garinger, Mr. Ready was to be our principal. After several weeks of settling down, we joined in the various activities of Central. A few of us began working on the Rambler, many entered into the various forms of athletics, while the rest of us found something to do that suited our particular tastes. At the end of the first semester we had made a good showing with a number of our class on the Honor Roll.

On March second and third, the Snips and Cuts Minstrel made a big hit, and on April twentieth, the Student Assembly Carnival upset Central's equilibrium as usual. Many of our number participated in the state music contest held in Greensboro.

Soon we began wondering why so many assemblies were held for seniors only; finally, it leaked out that they were preparing to be graduated, as we were supposed to do three years hence. In May they were graduated, and we sophomores hung around and took it all in.

The year just passed was important to us for many reasons, but mainly because it marked the year when the state took over the control of the schools. This change and the failure of the city to vote a tax supplement forced many to be graduated, gave us an eight months' school term, lowered our rating, and greatly limited activities in all the schools.

At the opening of school in September 1934 we, who were only sophomores the previous year, now became seniors. Dr. Garinger had come back to be our principal. This fact partially compensated for the loss of several popular members of our faculty.

In starting things off right, Gales McClintock was elected president of the Student Council and Charles Akers president of the Senior Class. The annual was to be published that year with Nell Puckett as editor and Jack Swinney as the business manager.

On November second, after a life of public service in North Carolina, Dr. Alexander Graham died. Dr. Graham was a friend to everyone and a benefactor to each of us. Undisputedly, he stands as one of the greatest crusaders for the cause of education this state has ever seen. On the fifteenth of that same month, a program was given honoring the memory of Dr. Graham. His portrait in the hall was appropriately draped and flowers placed beneath it. During the program a fire broke out in the music room, which did a small amount of damage and caused some excitement.

Just after the Christmas holidays, a project, which had been in preparation all fall was opened to the students, the English Reading Room. This room was comfortably furnished and filled with all types of literature. Just about this time the Monogram Club so admirably began their drive to secure $400 to save the minor sports here at the school. Central, as it usually does, came out ahead. Second semester elections were held and showed the following results: George Ray, senior class president and Creighton Sossoman, president of the student council. In February Miss Blair was relieved of her duties; consequently, the library had to be closed.

Again this spring the educational question was at stake. On March twenty-third a vote was taken in regard to putting on a tax supplement for the schools. Partially because of the efforts of our pupils and faculty this supplement was voted. This set us back on the road towards the top. The new conditions thus created were to go in effect the next year. Although rings had been ordered, mascots and diplomas chosen, many of us took advantage of the opportunity offered us and decided not to be graduated but to return the next year. For those who wanted to go ahead and be graduated, preparations went forward. On March twenty-third an impressive exercise was held in the Armory auditorium.

School opened for the 1935-36 session with many additions to our class. The first semester officers of the Senior Class were Hugh Ashcraft, president; Gales McClintock, vice-president; Mary Graham Morrison, secretary; Scottie Todd, treasurer. Student Council officers were Harry Winkler, president; Shadow Otten, vice-president.

Soon after the opening of school, work was begun on SNIPS AND CUTS with Charles Akers as editor and Edison Stewart as business manager. All too soon the Christmas holidays were over and semester examinations were upon us. The outcome of these tests caused a few to change their minds about graduating. During the last semester of this our final year of high school with its many activities, we were to be led by Jack Swinney as president of the Senior Class, Bob Wanzer as vice-president, Lessie Scholtz as secretary, and Bill Martin as treasurer. As soon as possible, all the committees were appointed to prepare for our graduation and Class Day exercises.

On March seventeenth, the spirit of old Saint Pat himself prevailed in Central's halls; and that night the big "blow off" came, the Student Council Carnival, which turned out to be a big success. On the twenty-eighth of this same month a part of the state dramatic contest was held in our auditorium. Central's production was "The Dutchess Says Her Prayers," starring Ann Pease, Ann Mauldin, and Harry Winkler. This was only one of the many activities of our dramatics class this year. In May an excellent issue of the "Lace and Pig Iron" was distributed to the students. This was the first issue in several years because the creative writing class, which publishes the magazine, had been discontinued for the past few years.

Under the direction of Coach Bob Allen we had a very successful athletic season. All our teams showed a great improvement over last year. The gym classes, which were resumed this year, had a majority of the students enrolled.

Time passed, committees worked, midnight oil burned, the annual came out, and we had reached the climax of our high school career. With a series of varied emotions Class Day passed and at the conclusion of an interesting graduating program we were awarded our diplomas.

The year of 1935-36 was important to Central for many reasons: the school returned to the standard it had before it was taken over by the state; complete motion picture and public speaking equipment was installed; many new classes were added; the school, in general, was much improved.

In the hope that this will, in the coming years, recall fond memories, and that it may prove a worthwhile record, this History of the Class of 1936 is respectfully submitted.

BILLY HACKNEY, Class Historian.

CLASS PROPHECY

As I walked down South Tryon Street, I realized that Charlotte had changed a great deal in the twenty-five years of my absence. Almost all of the old familiar landmarks were gone, and in their places stood many tall buildings and business establishments. One shop window caught my eye. It was filled with the latest thing in men's clothing and on the window was the firm name—McGinnis and Winkler. The names seemed familiar and with a sudden surge of memory, Joe and his green gaberdine suit and Harry with his haircut and striking sweaters flashed across my mind. I entered the shop and, sure enough, there was Harry, aged a bit and minus the sweater, but with the same old hair cut. He didn't recognize me, but after introducing myself, a smile flashed across his face, and there were several minutes of back-slapping and general questioning. Joe, it seemed, was in New York on a buying trip; but Harry would be only too pleased to leave the store to his corps of assistants and personally escort me around the city to meet some of our old buddies.

I asked to be taken to the offices of the Charlotte News-Observer to see how Laurie Dickson was getting along. He had merged the two papers several years before and was well on the way to become as famous a man in the newspaper business as William Randolph Hearst had been when Laurie and I were boys at Central High School. As we entered the building, the metal name plate informed the world at large that Dandridge Isom had drawn the plans for the structure, and that the William Dye Construction Company had built it.

Laurie was in the middle of getting out the early noon edition of the paper and turned us over to his assistant, Vinton Tucker. The hard grind of the newspaper game had taken its toll of Vinton. He had lost weight until he tipped the scales at a mere two hundred and ten pounds. Virginia Smith was over at one desk, pounding out society news. Among the stories was one that caught my eye. It read: "Mr. and Mrs. William Gribble will entertain this evening in honor of the twentieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nivens. Mrs. Nivens prior to her marriage was Miss Bertram Skelding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Skelding of this city." Virginia told me that Billy had married Annie Mae Brown, and that Blake Stephens and Betty Guy had been married for about eight or nine years.

Frank Oates was in the sports corner, and beckoned for us to come over. He had just got back from the heavyweight championship fight at the Blalock Stadium in New York and was full of praise for Scottie Todd, the new champion and home town boy who made good in the big city. Scottie's manager is none other than Eddie "Baron" Stewart, and the boys seem to be headed for big things in the world of fistic maneuvers. Frank said that Bill Blalock is a big shot in New York now, having bought out the Madison Square Garden interests and built his own stadium. He also owns the New York Giants, a big derby hat, and a box of long black cigars.

Over in the Associated Press Office news from all over the country was coming in over the wires, but it looked like a roll call of the class of '36 of Central.

Lieutenant Allen Otten of the U. S. Army Air Force had cracked up that day while testing a plane for the Hal Love Cup Races. He was uninjured (as usual), but the plane, designed by Gene Robertson, was demolished. It seems that Gene is still building airplanes that won't fly.

Lead, news - City.

Betty Sewell, nicknamed the "Woman Bluebeard" by reporters, has just married again. This makes the seventh trip to the altar for the prominent night club singer. Husband number seven is Casper Chandler, well-known New York man-about-town. The couple would make no statement except: "We love each other, and that's all that really matters."

Bill Haynes and Mary Graham Morrison, successors to Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, have finally come to an agreement with their producers concerning the disputed clauses in their present contract. A substantial increase in salary, fewer pictures per year, and the services of Earl Catton, famous director, were the main objectives gained by the internationally known dance team in their squabble with the McClintock Film Corporation.

Friends of Miss Nancy Akers, prominent woman politician, were today urging her to announce her candidacy for the governorship of North Carolina. If Miss Akers enters the race, she will be the first woman to seek election to this office. She is backed by the Woman's League of Better Government and would probably cause a split in the ranks of the supporters of both George Woodfin and Paul Chaplin, who have already announced their candidacy for the race. George is a former United States Senator from North Carolina, while Paul is a prominent prohibitionist and is seeking election on a bone-dry platform. His campaign managers are Walter Wilson and Tom McWhirter.

Anne Pease, prominent designer of women's apparel, today named the ten best dressed women in the United States. Mrs. Jack Swinney, wife of the large financier, and Mrs. Robert Stuckey, wife of the famous band leader, headed the list. Jack married Barbara Davis, and Robert married Zoe Strawn. The latter is suing him for divorce, mental cruelty being the grounds. No doubt Stuckey's former teachers would be surprised at the mental part of it.

Chief Justice Sam Walden of the United States Supreme Court today upheld the administration by declaring its Share-the-Wealth Plan constitutional. He read the decision of the majority vote, and Justice Gilmer Holton read the minority opinion. The vote was six to two in favor of the question.

The D. A. R. closed its thirty-eighth annual convention in Chicago today with the election of officers for the coming year. Georgie Hurt was elected to succeed Betsy Tingley as president-general.

Aubrey Simpson, famous playwright and axe murderer of Robert Richardson, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Raleigh today. Aubrey committed the murder because Miss Louisa Duls, critic of his literary works, said the murders in his plays were not true to life, and he wished to get an authentic background for his next tragedy. Warden Hugh Ashcraft was quoted as saying that Aubrey would have plenty of leisure time, entirely free from interruptions, to work on his masterpiece.

Jean Little and Lessie Scholtz, two of America's most prominent pacifists, have just returned from a six months' tour of Europe. While abroad, they made an extensive study of the armament problem in Switzerland, and report that this country's navy far exceeds treaty strength.

Charles Akers was released from the Hicks Memorial Hospital today following a nervous breakdown suffered several years ago. His illness was attributed to that strange malady, Snips and Cuts, and to gazing too long at Eugene the Jeep.

The rhythmical ticking of the teletype machine was interrupted by a sudden spurt of speed. Flash! Flash! Flash! Police officers in all Southern cities were warned today by Bob Wanzer, head of the U. S. Department of Justice, to be on the lookout for Charlie Green, criminal maniac who delights in torturing his victims by reading to them his literary brainstorms. It is said that Green developed this tendency while in high school. The society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is offering a reward of ten thousand dollars for the apprehension of this arch-fiend.

Two G-Men, Bill Martin and Milton Woodside, are working on the case and are confident of an early arrest.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF THE CLASS OF THIRTY-SIX

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
County of Mecklenburg,
Precinct of Central High School.

We, the class of nineteen thirty-six, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do here publish, make, and declare this to be our last will and testament.

ITEM I—As it pleased the class of thirty-five to bequeath unto us their supposed possessions, we give and dispose of the same in the following manner and form:

ITEM II—We, the seniors, do leave to the junior class with both good and malicious intent the following donations and advice:

DIVISION I—Donations

SECTION 1. We, the class of thirty-six, do leave to the class of thirty-seven the title "Ye ole Seniors" and all the few privileges thereunto attached.

SEC. 2. To those who have been discriminated against in order to give us the best seats in the auditorium, we gladly relinquish said holdings to you and your beneficiaries.

SEC. 3. To you we leave the full weight of the pride of Central, warning you to preserve it in its entirety and uphold it to the utmost.

SEC. 4. Since it is the duty of the senior class to lead the school in every organization, we leave to you the responsibility of keeping Central's school spirit rampant at all times.

SEC. 5. As we leave this building today, we cease to be an integral part of our school. These caps and gowns, which have been the heritage of our school for many ages, we hand down to you. Be proud of this heritage, for it symbolizes everything our school stands for. We enjoin you to give them in turn to the sophomore class only after you have justified the trust we have placed in you.

DIVISION II—Advice

SECTION 1. Abide by the decisions of the traffic officers and the marshals for your own good.

SEC. 2. Use this last year to prepare yourself for what is coming next year whether it be college, a job, or the CCC.

SEC. 3. Read the editorials in the Rambler, and find out how the school stands on certain questions of import.

SEC. 4. Be pals with everybody, for learning to get along with people is the most important requisite for success.

SEC. 5. Do not try to participate in too many outside organizations or extra curricular activities.

SEC. 6. Don't procrastinate, for you might be sitting with the audience when all your friends receive their diplomas. Study now.

SEC. 7. As our final piece of advice, we, the departing graduates, bid you take due notice of everything that we have done and be warned.

ITEM III—With a sadness which sweeps over us as we contemplate our leaving, we realize that we must depart from the school in which we have spent the best part of our lives; but, before we start on the broad highway of life, we wish to make these final disposals.

DIVISION I—We, the senior class, do leave the spirit of our presence to our school.

DIV. II—To the faculty who have scolded us, praised us, worked with us, played with us, and patiently borne with our shortcomings, we leave our appreciation for trying to make us into such useful citizens that even Miss Rankin would be satisfied.

DIV. III—In the hearts of all true sons and daughters of Central will remain a friendship for "the one and only Nellie." To him, the senior class leaves its thanks for his willingness to help and his ever present cheeriness.

DIV. IV—We, the senior class of thirty-six, leave to you, the juniors, the choice of either continuing or discontinuing the precedent we have started. In the event that you do continue this presentation, we enjoin you to place these paintings, which represent the artistic talent of our classes, in a gallery to be added to each year by the departing class as an established custom in the traditions of Central High School.

DIV. V—We, as a class, will and bequeath the school to Dr. Garinger with hearty wishes for happier years.

DIV. VI—Miss Fore, we, the senior class, salute you and offer our thanks for preparing us for this grand climax, our graduation.

DIV. VII—To you, Miss Jones, we say good-bye with heavy hearts. We know we have been too much trouble puttering about the office, but such looks and personality are deserving of more attention than we can ever pay.

ITEM IV—We, the following, wish to make these individual bequests:

I, Aubrey Simpson, do hereby bequeath unto Howard Copeland my special ability to dress well.

I, Laurie Dickson, in the presence of everybody bequeath unto Milton Short the last quarter of the bull I didn't get to shoot if he faithfully promises to provide another bull for the next in line of bull shooters.

I, Zoe Strawn, will to Martha Jean Brooks my long string of admirers, both male and female.

I, Barbara Davis, will and bequeath my string of senior superlative trophies to Sybil Searcy.

I, Georgie Hurt, bequeath my ability as a go-getter to Clinton Powell.

I, Annie Mae Brown, will and bequeath to Nancy Jones some of my surplus energy lest I pop with annie-mae-tion.

I, Betty Sewell, as I leave these haunted quarters sorrowfully bewailing my manifold loss, tenderly leave a portion of my glibness to "Sis" Torrence.

I, Anne Pease, bequeath my extensive wardrobe to Carolyn Sibley.

I, Harry Winkler, leave the Esquire to George Jenkins.

I, Nancy Kirkpatrick, as it befits one who possesses such prolix verbosity do hereby affix my name as bequeathing unto David Citron my impressive and comprehensive vocabulary.

I, Terrell Fridell, leave what is left of the chemistry laboratory to Mr. Norman with the hope that he doesn't have any more students so destructive as I.

I, William Dye, do hereby leave my Latin pony, my answer books, and my other aids, which have enabled me to procure all A's every term, to Jane Alexander.

We, Eddie Stewart, Hugh Ashcraft, and Harry Winkler, being unable to decide which one of us owns the school, do hereby bequeath it to Marion Hargrove to be used as he sees fit, with the stipulation, however, that he leave it where he found it.

I, Gales McClintock, leave my scrubbed face and rosy cheeks to Edgar Terrell.

I, Bill Blalock, do leave the privilege of toting Central's pigskin to Tom Smith.

I, Shadow Otten, leave "It" to Syd Alexander with the hope that he gets as much enjoyment out of "It" as I did.

I, Bob Wanzer, do bequeath, will, and make provision for the distribution of my pet curling irons to Jimmy Capps to replace those old worn out ones he now has in use.

I, Bill Martin, do hereby sorrowfully dispose of my knowledge of femininity to Billy Felts, reminding him that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

I, Charles Green, w-w-will and b-b-bequeath my c-c-clear and d-d-d-distinct spe-spe-spe-conversation to-to-to- J. C. Ri-Ri-Ri-Ri—(Aw you know whom I'm talking about).

We, do hereby declare and nominate the officers of the class of thirty-eight; namely, Jimmie Greenwood, President; Henry De Vega, Vice-President; Jack Nowell, Secretary, and Adrian Wise, Treasurer, as executors of this, our last will, and give the power to carry out the bequests and requests herein before mentioned, expressly relieving them of giving bond for the faithful performance of their duty, but enjoin upon them a full and completed accounting of the trusts herein imposed to the Senior Class of nineteen hundred and thirty-seven.

In Witness Whereof, we, the class of Thirty-six, the testators above named, have hereunto set our hands and seal this fourth day of June in the year of our Lord Nineteen hundred and thirty-six, at Central High School, Charlotte, North Carolina.

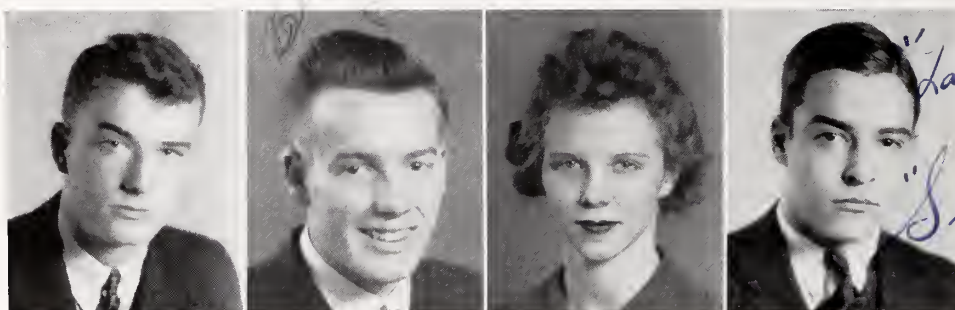

THE SENIOR CLASS OF THIRTY-SIX OF CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL.

BILL HAYNES, Class Lawyer.

Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the above class of thirty-six as being their Last Will and Testament, we, the undersigned in the presence of each other and in the presence of the above, affix and sign our names hereto as a last request of said class.

FUNDAMENTALS

Certain fundamental courses are assigned a place in the curriculum, not because they have great intrinsic value, but because they are necessary means to a desired end. As the obtaining of essential knowledge and skill requires of the student much drill work, such courses are not always the most attractive ones; but they have the "meek and lowly grace" that dignifies the humblest tools.

The mastery of the elemental principles of mathematics, of grammatical forms and sentence structure, and the building of an adequate vocabulary enable a student to meet more efficiently the ordinary demands of practical living. Knowledge of the rudimentary principles of science brings an understanding of the more common electrical devices. Moreover, courses of a more or less mechanical nature, stressing frequent repetitions of subject matter, help the student to acquire fundamental habits of work: concentration, perseverance, accuracy, and logical thinking.

The fundamental courses constitute the necessary foundation upon which specialization in many fields is based. For example, surveying depends directly upon higher mathematics; chemical engineering, upon science; diplomatic service, upon the languages; writing, upon the mastery of sentence structure.

V O C A T I O N S

Surely a great problem of society would be solved if every normal adult were a self-supporting citizen. More heavily than ever before the obligation falls upon the secondary schools to fit its boys and girls for earning their living in the future. Men are meeting greater competition in finding work; women, in an increasing number of instances, are being called upon to provide for their families. The schools must give them adequate preparation.

Especially for that group of students, including the vast majority of the high school population, who intend not to pursue higher education, but to become absorbed in the industrial or business world immediately, is practical education essential. They should have, first, an opportunity to explore several fields of work and, then, intensive training for one definite vocation.

Central High School's Vocational Department offers opportunities for such preparation. Through the History Department, the student has learned the background for many present-day industrial and business institutions. Such courses as Commercial Law and Commercial Geography teach him the functions of these institutions. The actual technique and methods required by various vocations are obtained in the Typing, Shorthand, Bookkeeping, and Office Practice Classes. Commercial Art explains one means of directing public attention to the products of business and industry. Thus the practical education cycle is complete.

LEISURE

With the multiplication of time-saving mechanical devices and with the shortening of working hours, men and women are being suddenly confronted with the problem of how to spend their leisure time.

For the past decade and more, educational experts, foreseeing the present condition, have been pointing out the increasing need for preparing boys and girls to spend their free time pleasurably and profitably.

A well-rounded program for leisure-time activities should include out-of-door sports, social activities, and pursuits that one can follow in solitude. The secondary school must equip its students for participation in these varied kinds of activities.

The Physical Education Department of Central encourages students to take part in those sports which they can continue to enjoy as they grow older, such as, tennis, swimming, and golf.

Through carnivals, plays, home room entertainments, and the activities of many extra-curricular clubs, the school attempts to help students make friendly contacts with one another, to adjust themselves socially. The clubs also stimulate pupils to develop their inner resources by finding an avocation which will fill their leisure time enthusiastically. The Scientific Research Club, the Photographers' Club, the Dramatics Club, the Rifle Club, the Oratorical and Debating Society, and other similar groups have many devotees.

Classes in music and art, creative writing and acting, serve to foster the creative urge, which can bring much leisure-time enjoyment to its possessors.

One of the more delightful of all ways to spend one's free time is in reading. The individual who has learned to appreciate good literature and to enjoy constructive reading need never be lonely or bored. At will, he can experience stimulating thoughts, adventure, romance and identification with other personalities. The Literature Classes teach literary appreciation. The English Reading Room and the Main Library constitute the very heart of the school.

ETHICAL CHARACTER

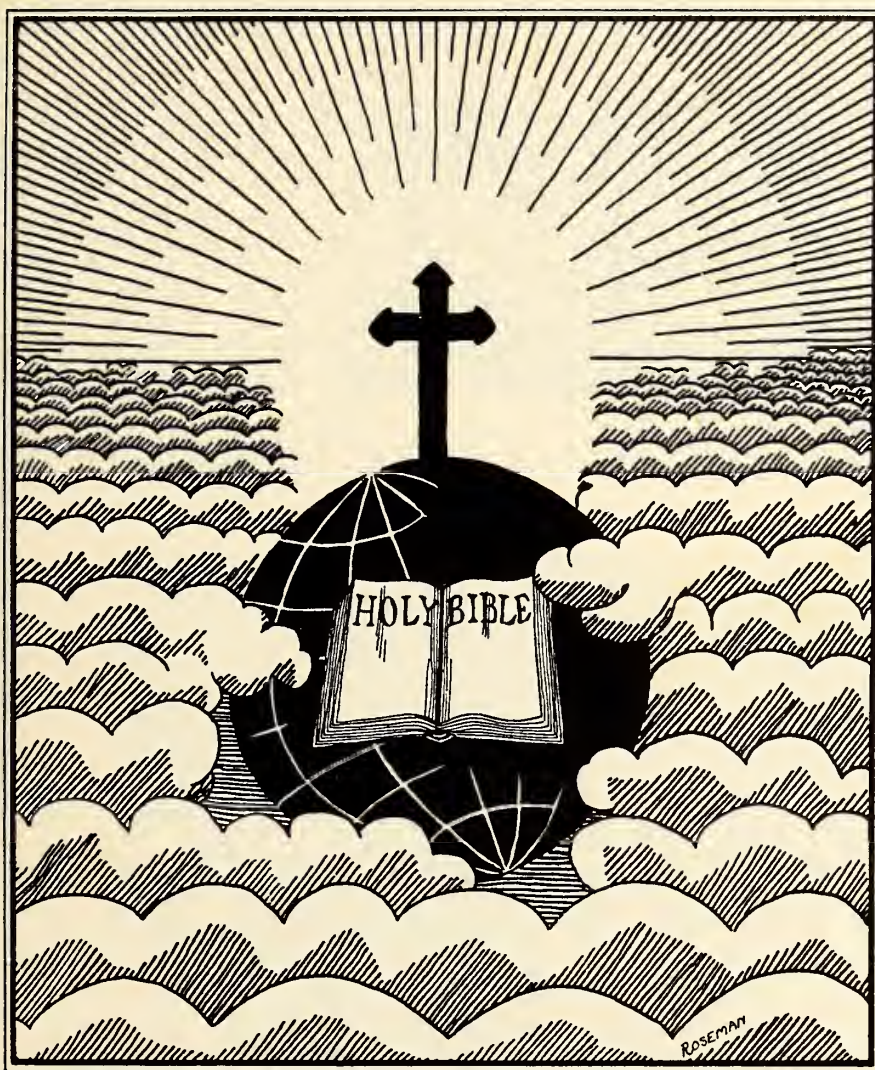

Character is the mighty bridge spanning the rushing flow of life, its pillars grounded on earth and solid rock, its exquisite structure erected by each minute throb of the heart, steadfastly it stands when around it blow wild winds and furious seas, every bolt being welded into place by the molten gold of sincerity, unselfishness, honor, and faith.

Among the seven cardinal principles of education, character holds the place of preëminence. Though a man or woman be healthy, successful in his vocation, and seemingly indispensable to the community, without character he is as nothing, for he lacks that inner harmony which alone is satisfying to the nature of man.

Character is moulded not by the information received in any one course but rather by the decisions of an individual in the long series of minor crises which make up the fabric of his everyday life, in school and out. The study of literature and of dramatics tends to broaden the sympathies of the student for types of people unlike himself; discussions in history classes help him to acquire tolerance for other races and other creeds; the activities of The Student Government Association teach self-forgetful coöperation for the good of the group; all classes set a situation in which the student is guided in the development of self-mastery, of industry, and of honesty.

Though all the experiences of school life share in the shaping of character, the Bible Classes have a special obligation, not only to give students religious instruction but also to make them more sensitive to ethical values and more earnest morally and to inspire their conduct with the motivating force of Christianity.

The Life Service Band challenges those who seek opportunities for life-long service in the mission and social welfare fields.

HOME MEMBERSHIP

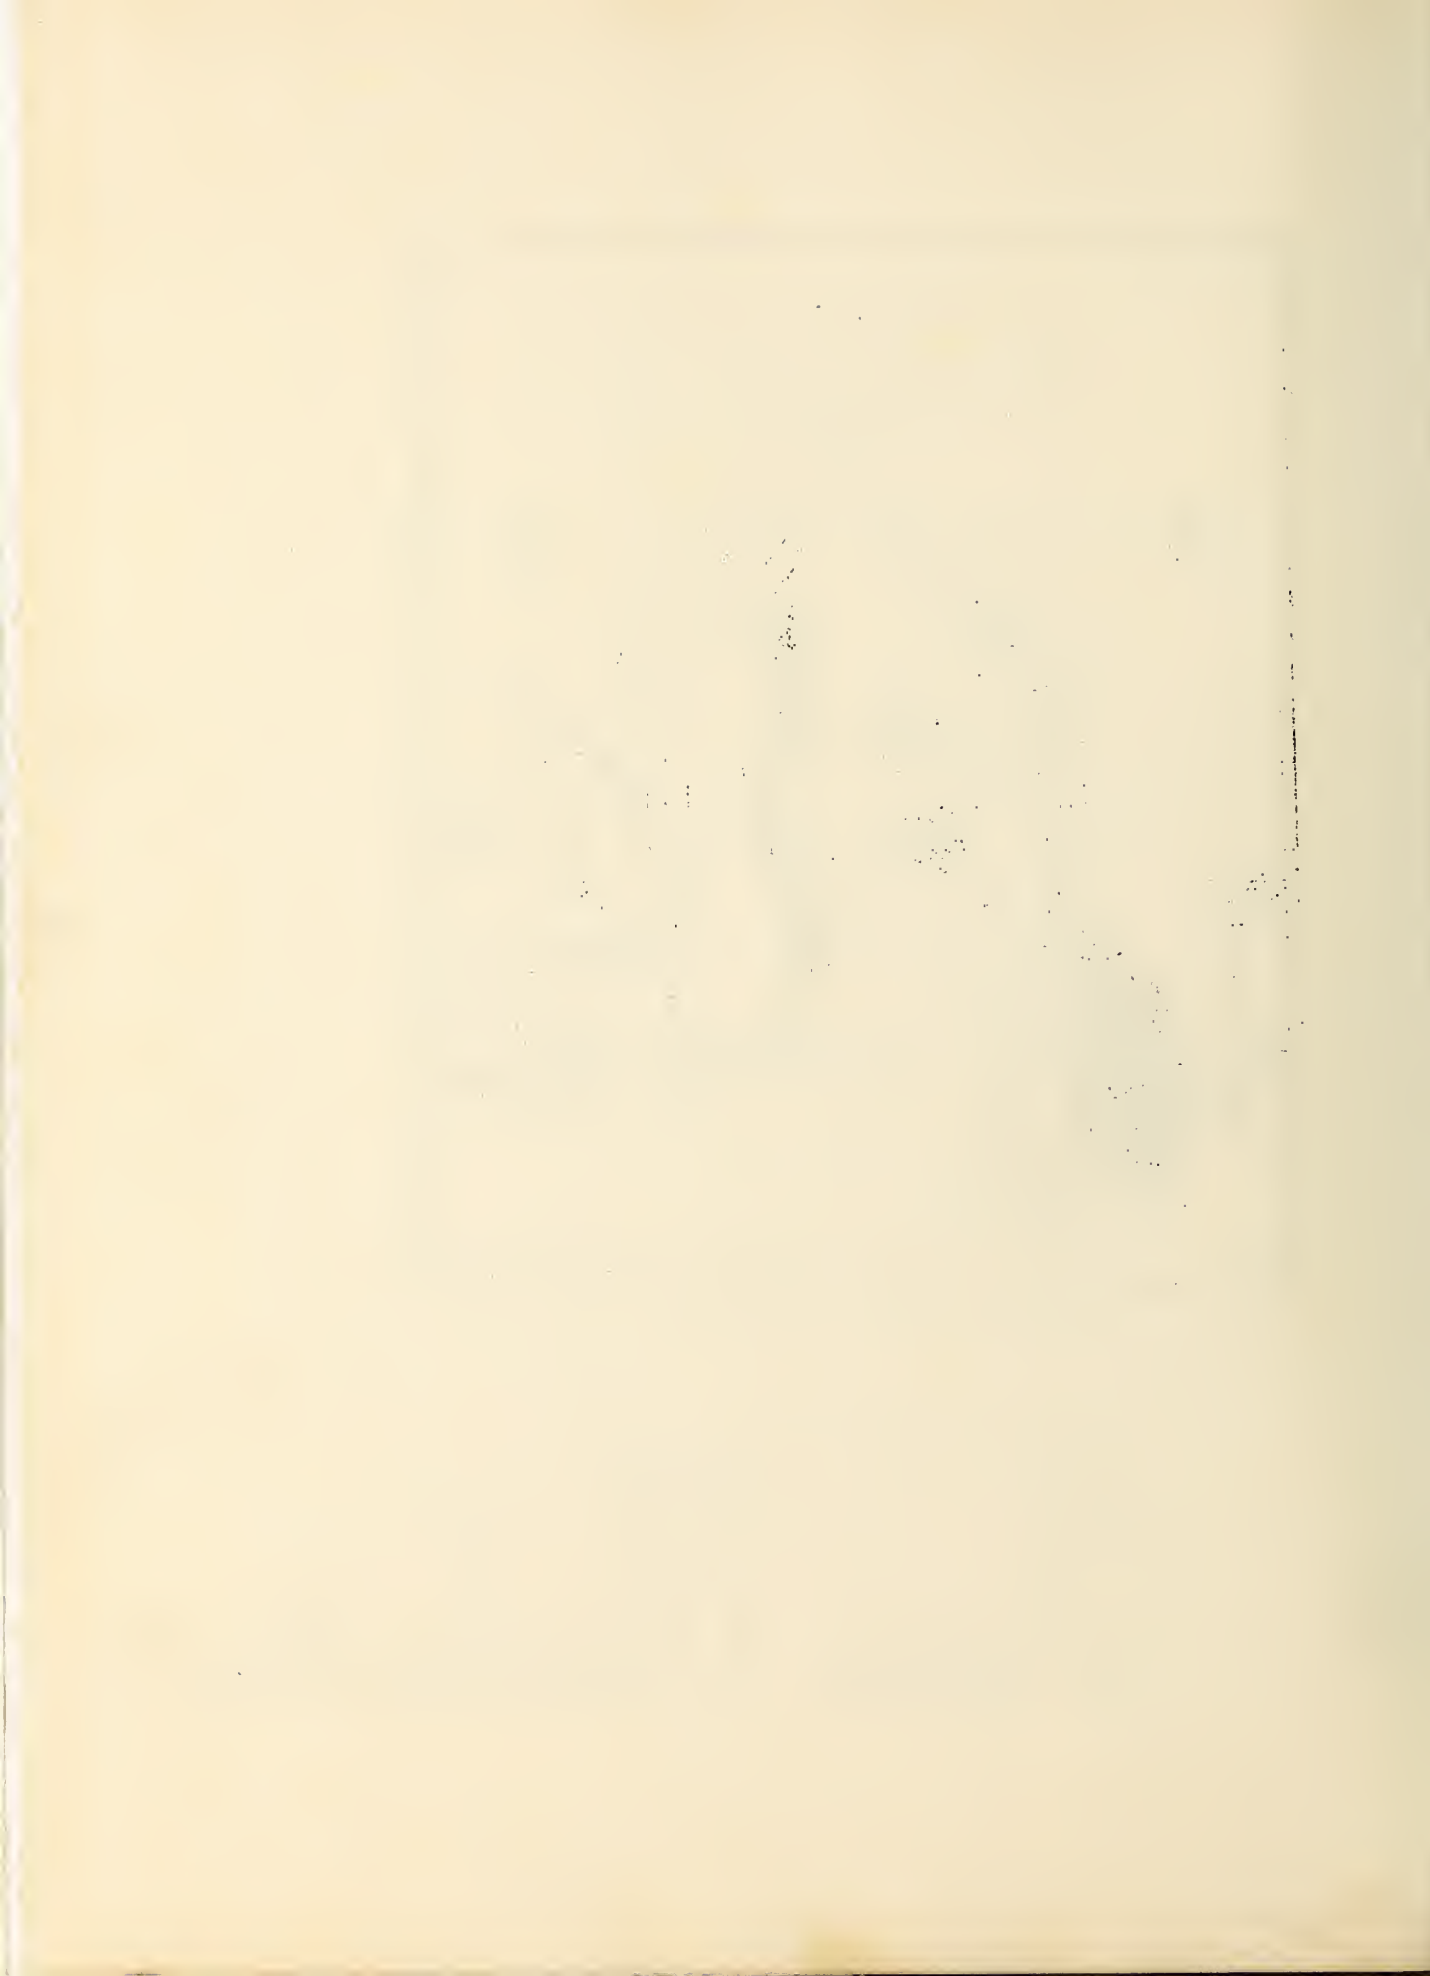

The training an individual receives in his home exerts upon him a more powerful influence, perhaps, than any other force he experiences. Therefore, upon the wise and responsible management of the home much of the slow, steady progress of society ultimately depends. To its students, the creators of the future homes of the country, the secondary schools must teach those qualities which establish the solidarity of the family. Especially is such instruction necessary now, when the speed and pressure of living constantly tend toward the disintegration of home life.

In Dietetics, Foods, and Clothing Classes girls are taught the principles of healthful, comfortable living. In the more advanced Foods Classes, in Home Crafts, and Interior Decoration, the boys or girls are taught the art of graceful living. They learn to budget their money wisely, to furnish their homes beautifully, to entertain their friends graciously, to accord courtesy and consideration to their partners in the coöperative enterprise of home-making.

Only when those who make the home possess such knowledge and such attitudes can their home life be most satisfying to themselves and most genuinely stimulating to their children.

H E A L T H

The high tension of modern living makes strenuous demands upon the vitality of the individual. Schools can not over-emphasize the importance of being physically fit, especially for boys and girls of high school age, who are passing through a period of physical strain. It is the duty of the secondary school to provide the necessary facilities for adequate physical development.

Central High School's Physical Education Department has assumed this duty and has executed it conscientiously. For those pupils not specializing in any sport, there are the physical education classes, in which a large group participates. Instead of using formal exercises, Central has adopted the system prevalent in the foremost high schools, that of teaching students to play various games, such as, volley ball, soccer, and baseball during the gymnasium period. Individual remedial work is given to students handicapped physically in any way.

For those who are qualified to take part in interscholastic athletics, there are the major sports, including football, basketball, boxing, track, and baseball, and the minor sports, including tennis, swimming, and golf.

The strict training regulations required of members of certain teams impress upon the players' minds the importance of observing regular health habits.

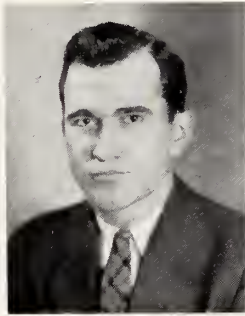

Connected with competitive physical exercise, there is much desirable concomitant learning, especially the value of team-work and of good sportsmanship.

Equally important as healthful exercise to the physical well-being of the individual is proper diet. The school cafeteria offers an opportunity for guidance in the selection of proper foods.
